

GOSSIP OF THE HORSES.

INQUIRIES ALREADY FOR A FUTURE BOOK ON THE BROOKLYN.

Ramapo and Sir Walter Will Be Most Eagerly Supported Three-year-olds in the Boulevard Handicap—Many Engagements for Trotters—A Game of Billiards Between the Late W. H. Wilson and John H. Shultz That Should Be Handled Down to History—New Orleans Entries.

Already those who are fond of speculating on the thoroughbreds are inquiring about the chances of getting some money on the candidates for the Brooklyn Handicap, and there is no doubt that the enterprising Chicagoans and others who will lay the odds will receive plenty of business. There was probably half a dozen future books on the track, and among them the most popular was that which was conducted here in New York, but with the police more vigilant than ever, the anti-hunting constitution in operation there is probably no sanguine who will have the hardihood to come out boldly and announce the odds.

Those who bet on Dr. Rice last year got their money in every instance save one, and those who ran the game did not lose or make as much money as they would have.

Sir Walter was most persistently supported from the start.

In looking over the weights allotted by Mr. Vosburgh, the eye of every betting man will be caught by the name of George Wilkes.

Wilkes, the famous trotter of the late W. H. Wilson, who the famous George Wilkes, who was seemingly allotted to us by Simmons, and who is now known to be the greatest trotting sire of his generation, if not of all time, was taken to Kentucky. Wilson had paid $28,000 a year for him, and he has won more than one racing term in the annals of the sport.

He had played poker on the Mississippi River steamboats before the war, and was always a favorite with the gamblers, and he has given up, and a coat that in those days could win only $100 is now able to compete for prizes worth thousands.

It was through the endeavors of the late W. H. Wilson that the famous George Wilkes, the English champion, rode a mile in 2:10, it was believed possible to put the record under two minutes.

Now this system of record breaking has been improved, and while some remarkable one-mile records may be made upon special straightaway courses this year, it is the track record that is interesting the majority of riders.

The Central Horse Club of America has engaged the services of the following men to nominate road riding this season: greatest individual mileage, a gold medal; best individual performance, a silver medal; greatest ninth century record, a fine banner.

Monk Scott, who made such a creditable record upon the track and road last season, has been placed in the top bracket under the auspices of the Crescent Wheelmen of Plainfield, and succeeded in lowering all the short-distance records.

He intends to divide his time between track and road racing this year.

Shultz is a candidate for reappointment as official handicapper for the New Jersey district.

The Greenwich Wheelmen will hold their annual election of officers tomorrow night.

The National Bicycle Association is the name of a new organization recently formed in this city with headquarters at Twenty-fifth street and Sixth avenue.

Harry Lewis, a well-known class rider of Harry Lewis, died at his home near Media last week.

The annual century run of the Metropolitan Association of Cycling Clubs will be held in June. The association will have a meeting tomorrow night.

Chief Conroy, S. A. Boyle of the Pennsylvania Club, and J. A. C. Linsenmaier, who was nominated as a candidate for the Vice-Presidency and Treasurer of the League, refuses to become a candidate for either office.

SPECULATING ON TIME.

Cycling Authorities Look for a Mile to Be Broken in 1895 This Year.

Bicycle racers, after reviewing the records created during last season, are speculating as to where the one-mile figures will be placed this year. Racing authorities in this country predict that, with such men as Johnson, Bald, Tyler, Sanger, Tissi, and Callahan in harness, the one-mile track record will be lowered to 1 minute 35 seconds. When Willie Windle reduced the mile record to 1:25 in 1894, and in the following year lowered it to 1:24, the performances were regarded as phenomenal.

In England early in 1892, when F. J. Osmond, the English champion, rode a mile in 2:10, it was believed possible to put the record under two minutes. Now this system of record breaking has been improved, and while some remarkable one-mile records may be made upon special straightaway courses this year, it is the track record that is interesting the majority of riders.

RECORDS AT THE ALLEYS.

Tournament Bowlers Continue Good Scores.

The contest in the Wholesale Drug Trade Association tournament is still an open one. Colgate & Co.'s representatives are making a rapid advance, and may possibly take one of the prizes. In the Bank Clerks' League, the Bank for Savings' players lost their second game of the Park, Davis & Co.'s team now have a clear lead, season last Wednesday night, but they have only won one game to date, and if they can pull off a victory on that occasion they should be besides assuming all repairs.

Harrison Island is one of three islands in Echo Bay and contains five acres. On it are three buildings and a vault. The Island was taken possession of in 1845 by David Harrison, a member of the New York bar, who had married into a large section of the town in the vicinity of Echo Bay. Harrison subsequently built the large three-story structure on the island, and later lived there the life of a recluse, going to and from there about once a week by way of a bridge from an adjoining island to the mainland. When he died in 1876, he was buried in the vault on the island. He was a brilliant lawyer, but his eyes were very small and his hands trembled. He took a son, Frank Harrison, who sold the property to Adrian Iselin, Jr., in 1887, for about $15,000. The latter built it up, and in 1892 sold it to James W. Foster, Glendale A. C. Linsenmaier, Peter J. O'Connor, and Thomas W. Higgins, who are the present proprietors.
